

Helmholtz Graduate School for
Polar and Marine Research

Understanding peer-reviewed Publishing

Dr. Gunther Tress, Tress Academic

Date &amp; Time:	9 April 2019	9 am – 5 pm
Location:	AWI Bremerhaven, room E-4025
Language:	English
POLMAR credit points:	1
Registration:	info.polmar@awi.de

Course content:

This one-day training will give you a compact introduction into the process of peer-review publishing. It will cover the most important aspects of preparation, writing and submission of papers. It will also explain open access publishing. The course is especially aimed for beginners who have no or little publishing experience so far. This one-day training will not go into the details of how to write a paper; this is subject of a different course offered later this year offered by the same trainer ("Publishing in peer-reviewed journals").

Target group:

The course is especially aimed for beginners who have no or little publishing experience so far. It is highly recommended to take this course in the first year of a PhD, because it teaches the fundamentals of scientific publishing and will help you to design your individual publishing strategy and plan. Please contact us if you plan to subscribe for both writing courses in one go!

Students' comments on this course:

"I gained much information about writing a paper in a journal."

"I have more motivation now to write a paper"

"The publishing process was explained in detail"

"I liked the exercises"

"I can now set up a strategy for my 3 papers I need to publish during my PhD"

"The instructor explained explicitly how the peer-reviewed was proceeded, which was a black box for most of us so far!"

More information: <https://tressacademic.com>

---

Our courses are free of charge for all participants. However, they do have a price and can cost POLMAR as much as 150 euros per day per student. Please take this into account when cancelling your place at the last minute.

---